SECTION 179
IRS TAX DEDUCTIONS

Businesses can take advantage of Section 179 of the IRS Tax Code when purchasing or financing equipment and software. This incentive makes it easier to invest in the tools needed to grow your business while managing costs. By using Section 179, companies can better fit essential equipment into their budget and improve cash flow. In 2026, businesses may deduct up to $2,560,000 of qualifying purchases—allowing for immediate tax savings, even before financing is paid.

Benefits of Section 179

- Improve Cash Flow - Equipment financing helps you acquire needed equipment without upfront costs, freeing up cash for other expenses.
- Reduce Taxes - IRS Section 179 allows you to deduct a portion of the qualifying equipment in the year of purchase, reducing your tax bill.
- Preserve Credit - Handle sudden equipment or facility repairs without disturbing your business or slowing down operations.
- Gain Predictability - Equipment financing typically offers fixed monthly payments, making it easier to budget your expenses.

Having the right equipment in place allows you to start generating revenue and earning a profit sooner, without tapping into your existing cash reserves. By taking advantage of the savings created through the Section 179 tax deduction, you can reinvest those funds into other areas of your business, supporting continued growth and long-term success.

Offering equipment financing for both new and used equipment, with funding available up to $250K and flexible terms ranging from 36 to 60 months. Our streamlined process is designed to be fast and easy, helping you access the equipment you need without unnecessary delays.
